

COMPLETE COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT APPROACH (CCDA)

JAM is an eyewitness to heartbreaking situations in Africa. We work within communities that suffer from severe, often unforgiving, socio-economic circumstances as a result of abject poverty.

JAM has been expanding its expertise in relief and sustainable development in Africa since 1984. Our programs in three African countries, i.e. Angola, Mozambique, and South Sudan are based on a Complete Community Development Approach (CCDA). Communities are trained alongside these programs, ensuring the opportunity for sustainable program outcomes.

Our programs focus on food security, micronutrient intervention, assistance to orphans and vulnerable children, the provision of water and sanitation, HIV/AIDS program, skills development, and food development that include agricultural programs and the production of food.

JAM strongly believes that without education there can be no development therefore schools form an important platform for the work JAM does.

It is pleasing to know that JAM's vision to enhance capacity within African communities through actions that will sustainably HELP AFRICA HELP ITSELF is entrenched in the hearts and minds of all of our staff, and our devoted donor base.

The CCDA four stages of intervention are:

- Meeting immediate needs
- Capacity building for community ownership and management
- Transition of ownership
- Oversight and advocacy

JAM
JOINT AID MANAGEMENT

Through these four stages JAM is able to:

- Identify the most urgent needs within a community, and meet them immediately.
- Create projects while building capacity of local leaders and stakeholders to manage programs and linkages with partners.
- Assist with the transition of these programs.
- Provide oversight and support.

This model is a sustainable business approach to development, treating the beneficiary community not just as the recipient of aid, but also as a partner in developing change.
